

The Process of Writing an Effective Paragraph

During the ongoing process of writing a paragraph, there are several paragraph-writing techniques that I use. I read each sentence. I check the paragraph are focused on one topic from start to finish. Sentences may need to be re-ordered for a better flow of logic, and transition words may be necessary. The reader needs enough information to understand the argument. Brevity is better. These techniques help me and, apparently, many scientific writers. All of these points are especially important for the abstract.